Hawthorne reevaluates

long-held notions about the Atlantic slave

trade's impact on a number of "stateless" -

or decentralized -

societies in Africa's

Guinea-Bissau region.

He shows that

decentralized societies

were by no means

passive victims of the slave trade, as

The process continued with the sowing of the rice was which conducted by the women. Rice seedlings were poured into water-soaked soil and submersed in the muddy soil using nothing but the slaves' bare feet (African American Heritage and Ethnography 2006).

The rice was then harvested, or collected from the fields and threshed.

began importing slave labor from Africa to plant and harvest rice. Because rice was being grown in many areas of Africa during these times, the Africans contributed their own methods of planting, hoeing, harvesting, threshing and polishing, which dramatically improved rice production capabilities.
